Many Awards, Scholarships To Students At Graduation

In presenting awards to various members of the class, Headmaster Lindsay J. March made mention of the 100th anniversary of the first Panchard graduation.

He announced the following awards:

Commended For Saving Baby

Firefighter Norman Auchterlonie received the official commendation of the Board of Selectmen Monday night for his prompt action that saved the life of an infant.

Through effective use of an aspirator, he succeeded in relieving little Cynthia Ann Joy, who had suffered a gagging and choking spell at her home Sunday night. With Firefighter Robert Demers, Auchterlonie had responded to a call from the baby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Joy of Memorial cir. They found the child gagging and discolored.

While Demers drove the ambulance, Auchterlonie used the aspirator continuously. By the time the vehicle reached So. Union st., Lawrence, the baby had resumed normal breathing. She was released from the Lawrence General Hospital Monday.

The aspirator is an instrument that is inserted in a child's mouth and throat, through which a person breathes as a method of artificial respiration.

Platoon Commander, Deputy Chief John T. Cole, also commended Auchterlonie.

ANDOVER NEWS IN WEST VIRGINIA

Paul A. Johnson of Fairmont, W. Va., has sent along an interesting clipping that appeared in the Fairmont West Virginia recently.

"As a former resident", states Mr. Johnson, "and present subscriber to the Townsman, I thought that you and your readers might be interested in learning that the town occasionally makes news - though not exactly headlines - down here in West Virginia".

The clipping reported that "The Town of Andover, Mass. was purchased from the Indians for about $30 and a coat".

Discussion Of Merit Coming

A full report on the merit plan will be made at the next School Committee meeting.

Supt. Edward I. Erickson said this week that the report definitely will be on the agenda for the meeting.

Originally scheduled for Tuesday night, the session was postponed for an indefinite period after at least one member was unable to attend.

The merit committee has been working this spring on the evaluation of teachers, eligible for merit, who applied for it. Not all teachers, it is understood, made application for consideration.

It has been assumed that the committee's report to the School Committee will summarize the group's decisions and explain any problems encountered in putting the plan into operation. Meetings of the School Committee are normally open to the public.

Rumors Rampant

There have been many rumors along Main st. in recent days concerning the decisions of some long-time staff members to join other school systems. In two cases, personal reasons were given as the reason for leaving. School officials also point out that there can be many reasons for a staff member to go elsewhere, including the possibility that salaries are better.

The rumors heard throughout the town, and in many homes where there are youngsters attending schools, concern what is termed "unrest" in the parts of the school system.

The merit plan has been included among other reasons for this so-called "unrest".

Recent Resignations
In recent days, two high school faculty members have indicated that they will join the Melrose school system — Kenneth McNiry and Robert MacIntyre.

Thomas Ganley has resigned from the Junior High staff, and also will go to Melrose.

There have been several other resignations from the school system this spring, but many are considered to be the normal turnover.

Coaching Berths
The resignations of McNiry and MacIntyre create vacancies in the athletic department.

MacIntyre has been head football and track coach, while McNiry has been business manager. The School Committee, it is assumed, will be faced with the problem of filling these vacancies if the continuity of the athletic department is to be continued.

We, the Class of 1959, extend to you a sincere greeting on this happy occasion, an occasion of special significance to us for we are the 100 class to graduate from the high school in Andover.

We wish to express our appreciation to the School Committee for naming this hall the Punchard Auditorium in memory of Benjamin Punchard, who made a high school in Andover a reality.

It is a pleasure to welcome those who with patience and perseverance have led us along the paths of knowledge — our teachers; those who have exhibited a genuine interest in our achievements — our friends; and finally, those who this evening are seeing the culmination of years of self-sacrifice and devotion — our parents.

Tonight we leave behind us the joys and accomplishments of school life and enter upon new and untried paths. As we start this journey, we will take with us the skills and the knowledge we have developed during our school years. We who are here representing our class tonight will tell you of the meaning these attainments hold for us.

MUSIC-A UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE

"Music must take rank as the highest of the fine arts — as the one which more than any other ministers to human welfare." These words, written by Spencer more than three hundred years ago, are as true today as they were then.

Earliest man used music as a means of communication as well as a mode of expression. The jungle drums with their rhythmic patterns served to transmit news and warning, and when coupled with tribal dances, served as an emotional outlet for the savage. As man became more civilized, his musical efforts became more complex. Just as the darkness of ignorance was dispelled when man became able to read and write, so a new era of expression was born when he was able to communicate to others the melodies and harmonies that were within him.

The first efforts of man's creative ability followed strict laws. The Gregorian chants, typical of early musical endeavors, were beautiful in their simplicity. As man gained more knowledge, the polyphonic school of music emerged. This type of music had rules and forms, but allowed much more freedom of expression. Today man seeks to free himself of the ties of the past by inventing new forms and finding new methods of expression. Yet, the masters of the past were truly inventive. One can only wonder how stimulating a meeting between Bach and Gerry Mulligan would be, for although ages apart in time, each is considered a true creative genius.

The beauty of music is that one does not have to be a composer or a performer to enjoy it. Listening to music is a great experience, for it creates in each of us a certain reaction; no one listens to a piece of music in exactly the same manner as another.

Listeners to music can be divided into four separate types. The subjective type has his attention held by the sensory and emotional effects of the music. He has a feeling for the music. To some this can be a restful experience and extremely soothing; to others, it creates great depression and sorrow.

The second type of listener associates music with past experiences. The appeal to him is recalling in his memory previous experiences. Many people remember very vividly warm events in their lives and can recall the music associated with those events.

Then there is the objective type of listener. He assumes a critical, analytical attitude towards the music, listening for the quality of the performance and for the technical ability of the artist. When the performance is over, he is more likely to remember the technical ability of the performer rather than the beauty and the feeling of the music performed. This individual is particularly affected by the music of Beethoven, or some other of the greats, because of the advanced technical displays evident in these works.

Last is the character type listener, for whom music is personified as a subject. He thinks of music in terms of joyfulness, mysticism, recklessness. The music can be somber and heavy, or dainty and flighty. These people imagine that music talks to them. They might say, "It seems as if the music were joking with me, and it made me want to smile."

As people grow in years and experience, they also tend to grow in their appreciation of music. In childhood, the simple nursery rhymes and tunes with their primitive and basic rhythms seem to satisfy our need for expression. As we grow older, the types of music that attract us depend to some extent upon the types of music to which we have been exposed. As we pass through our adolescence and into young adulthood, we widen our range of musical experiences so that we are able to appreciate all types and styles of music. We pass through a rock-and-roll period to one of true appreciation of the finest music in the world. Our range then enables us to appreciate both the earliest type of music, such as that of Palestrina, and the most modern, such as that of Stravinsky.

Music has always meant much to me. I have heard music I do not pretend to understand, but I know that my musical tastes have become improved through listening. Two of the most rewarding experiences of my life have been musical ones. Membership in the school band has given me a chance to participate in a group activity, an experience which has been extremely worthwhile. The writing of the class song by a small group of students from the music appreciation class, of which I am a member, and its performance here has also been most gratifying.

Music appeals to all people, not only in this nation, but in others all over the globe. Unlike some of the other arts and sciences, music does not depend upon a common language for its appreciation. It is a common language. Its all inclusive nature was most effectively expressed by Longfellow who said, "Music is the universal language of mankind."

SCIENCE-A CHALLENGE TO MANKIND

By Mary J. Owens
How can we best describe the times in which we are living? As the atomic age? The space age? Usually, we think first of missiles, satellites, and powerful weapons. But it is more than these — it is an age of interest and advancement in science with unprecedented possibilities for peaceful developments as well as for weapons of war. Never before has man had more opportunities, more luxuries, and more conveniences. For most of us, it is truly an age of physical possessions — comfortable houses, fine school buildings, television sets, automobiles, modern electric tools, and appliances.

The age of science is a relatively recent one. Man has existed for approximately one million years, and has had a written language for about 6,000 years. Yet, it was only 350 years ago that Galileo studied the laws of objects falling from the Leaning Tower Of Pisa and originated experimental science. Since that time, science has revolutionized our way of living and thinking. One of the most typical characteristics of our times is the rapid change brought about by scientific knowledge. These changes have made us think and make decisions faster than we like and have raised many problems. Through prejudices against change, we have blamed science for pressures among countries which are actually caused by our own attitudes. Our advancement has clearly shown us the need for high standards and ethics.

Today, man is striving harder than ever before to improve his society and his way of life. Our generation must take an active part. As I see how science has increased our knowledge and opportunities for advancement, I look forward more and more to helping man understand and use scientific truth.

When we were small children and first noticed the world around us, all of us asked such questions as these. "Where does the snow come from?" "What is a rainbow?" "What are rocks made of?" As we grew older, this type of interest lessened for some of us. Others of us found stimulating answers, and along with these answers, many more questions. As our interest grew, a new awareness of the world was born in us. For me, life seemed to take on a greater depth — almost another dimension — because not only end results seem important but also the causes which bring them about. Young people who continue to find amazement and stimulation in the world of science through their high school years, usually discover their deeper interests pointing toward one or two particular fields. At this time, I am attracted more and more to the fields of physics and psychology.

Even those of us who do not claim any interest in science use the scientific method and ideas constantly in daily life. Whenever we salt our food, taste it, and salt it again, we are using an experimental method. If we test different gasolines in our cars to see which gives the best mileage, we are collecting data and drawing conclusions in a scientific manner. When we employ water softeners or spot removers, we are making use of chemical reactions. In weighing any object or sealing home-canned fruit, we are trusting in known physical principles. Science is too much a part of our lives for us to ignore it.

Science is the study of contrasts — from the minuteness of the atom to the vastness of the universe, from the complexity of natural phenomena to the simplicity and harmony of the laws describing them. It is thrilling to catch a glimpse, through the windows of physics, chemistry, or any of the other sciences, of the plan the Creator has built into our world. We learn that the millions of different substances we can identify all are composed of the same minute particles. A study of the laws and theories that scientists have spent years developing can fill us with excitement and wonder.

Science can appeal both to the person with the practical, mathematical mind and to the person with vivid imagination. To the engineer, the precision and logic of the laws and theories appeal. To the inventor, the vast realm of new possibilities holds interest. He projects his thoughts beyond what has already been discovered and tries to find something totally new.

For me, the greatest pleasure of science has not been in any one experience. Rather, it has been an excitement and thrill in understanding my environment a little better. I am told that as a small child I followed people around asking questions. Curiosity has always been a source of great pleasure for me. As I grow older, I hope that I can gain, rather than lose, curiosity in my surroundings.

A person can get pleasure from understanding science in much the same way he can from reading a good book, listening to a symphony, or studying great art. I am sure that the scientist who discovers something new feels the same satisfaction as the author or the composer.

At one time, science was considered completely in conflict with the arts. Today, we are beginning to see that science is another phase of truth and knowledge making up our modern culture. The conflict with the arts was an artificial prejudice arising from resistance to the changes in our lives produced by science.
With a little thought, we discover that these different kinds of knowledge can be entirely harmonious in the mind of the same individual. Consider Leonardo da Vinci back in the time that Columbus discovered America. He was a painter, sculptor, mathe-matician, and engineer, all in one. In our times, Albert Schweitzer is not only a missionary and medical doctor, but also a talented musician, author, and philosopher.

To active minds, the discovery of truth offers a challenge and a satisfaction. In these times, the study of science is one of the most rewarding approaches toward this end. I believe that Tennyson expressed in his poem, "Flower in the Crannied Wall," the thrill the scientist of today feels:

"Flower in the crannied wall, I pluck you out of the crannies, I hold you here, root and all, in my hand, Little flower - but if I could understand, What you are, root and all, and all in all,
I should know what God and man is."

ART-A REFLECTION OF LIFE

By Anne Berthold Paintings, like literature and music, is a way to express, record, and enjoy life. Ever since prehistoric times, man has had an indefinable desire and ability to put down what he felt to be his own interpretation of his life and thoughts. Many people do not seem to realize the true nature of art; they think it is a superficial hobby or something only a few can appreciate. However, art is an integral part of a person. Everyone has at one time or another been elated by perhaps the ocean at night, or terrified by a thunderstorm or a revolution. This is the beginning of artistic appreciation.

As in all activities, this intrinsic aesthetic sense and talent has to be cultivated. Today in the United States, we have a wealth of opportunity through the improved methods of teaching art in the schools, the better museum facilities, and the numerous books, magazines, and radio and television programs on art. In a recent article in the Atlantic Monthly, A Whitney Griswold, president of Yale University, stresses the importance of the fine arts in a liberal arts curriculum in order to "liberate and cultivate a man's innate intellectual and spiritual powers, to make him the master of tools, and to awaken and strengthen the humanistic impulses of society at their source, in the individual."

Some of the earliest records of human existence have been artistic ones. In 15,000 B.C. men living in what is now southern France and northern Spain painted on the walls of caves marvelous animal drawings which represented their struggle for existence. Rock paintings of 7,000 years later showed that the area which is now the Sahara Desert was once a lush, green forest, inhabited by cattle raisers.

Centuries later, the Greeks also reflected important phases of their life and thought in their unsurpassed sculpture and vase paintings, such as that so beautifully described by John Keats in his "Ode to a Grecian Urn."

Types of society naturally affect the art of different eras.
Thus during the Middle Ages, when the church influenced and controlled much of the life of Europe, religious themes dominated art. Even today, who is not moved by the impressive Gothic spires of cathedrals or the intricate patterns of stained glass windows?

One of the most important phases of the Renaissance was the reawakening of the arts and the celebration of life and man. In this period, artistic activity reached a peak in such men as Michaelangelo, Raphael, and Botticelli.

Today, the artist might react to this era of world wars and tensions as Picasso did in his mural "Guernica," which reflects the horror and brutality of war. Picasso's "Guernica" epitomized the feeling of millions of people against war and fascism. In this way art provides a bond among people whose nationalities, races, or governments differ. Through art we can appreciate the life and thought of societies whose ideologies we dislike or fear. Recently an exchange in the arts - for example, the American, Van Cliburn, who won a piano contest in Russia, or the Bolshoi Ballet which performed all over the world
- brought about better understanding between the people of both Russia and the West.

Throughout all these periods, we observe man's longing for self-expression, his desire to show his feelings and ideas in relation to the world. How well illustrated this is in the artist Van Gogh, who painted not only stars, cypress trees, and hills, but his intense feelings about them. Like all great artists, he has a craving to create, whether or not he was appreciated. Some artists have not been accepted until after their death, for then critics can see their work in perspective.

Confronted as we are today by a tremendous variety of art form, we are sometimes confused by what we see; but I feel we should not condemn any sincere art expression which may be a reflection of our own confused history.

The understanding and creative expression we acquire through art affects our whole lives. We gain from them an imaginative approach much needed in a conforming and materialistic society.

BIOLOGY-A KEY TO SECURITY

By Patricia A. Adams

In the recent report, "Education for the Age of Science," which was approved by President Eisenhower, Dr. James R. Killian Jr., former President of M.I.T., stresses the necessity of more scientific courses in our American educational systems in order to help maintain the security of the free world. He must surely include that most important science, biology, which deals with all living things from the simple pro-tozoa to the complex vertebrates; with the principles which govern life, such as the "flight or fight" instinct; and with the relationship of living things to their surroundings and to one another.

Although biology is the oldest branch of science, as an organized science, it is much more recent.
Its growth has been a struggle between the advanced thinking of several, and the retarded thinking of many. Today, we fully accept the need for science, and pay our respect to those who make new discoveries. Unfortunately, this has not always been the case. If the general public had not closed its mind to new and unproven ideas, but had encouraged men to experiment with them and to test them, our world would be much more learned about life and its problems.

There is a certain fascination in reading about the progress made in biology from the time of the Greeks, nearly 23 centuries ago, to our present time. As man gradually developed his ability to reason, he discarded many of the strange beliefs of his ancestors.
No longer did he consider disease a form of punishment, resulting from the ill wishes of demons. No doubt Hippocrates, well known as the "Father of Medicine," did much to dispel many of the strange beliefs of primitive man. Although he himself had many mistaken conceptions about the structure of the brain and the human body, such as the brain's being a radiator to cool the head, his work was so outstanding that his influence remains today in what is called the "Hippocratic Oath," taken by all doctors.

Progress in medicine as well as in other fields of science continued at a fairly rapid pace until the decline of the Roman Empire.
After Rome's fall, scientific progress was somewhat halted as numerous epidemic diseases stalked the civilized world, killing many. The rebirth of science came with a young physician named Vesalius, who dared to overthrow the accepted beliefs of that time.

Other great scientists, such as Harvey, Jenner, Pasteur, and Mendel, soon followed his lead.
From Vesalius to the present day, biology has expanded and broadened rapidly. Our modern schools, such as those in Andover, offer the student much more in the fields of science than ever before. When I was in the lower grades, I received some instruction in science; but as I advanced in school, science blazed its path into the spotlight, and various scientific courses were thrust upon me. I must honest-

FOUR ADDRESSES AT GRADUATION

I admit that I had little interest in science until I began my study of biology, my study of living things. Through this, a new world was revealed to me. Since then, my concern for biology has grown, so much so that I plan to enter the medical field next year.

Actually, the future of biology is immense. Just as Salk has conquered polio, so may one of us conquer cancer — one of the most puzzling and horrible diseases — or tuberculosis, or heart disease, or even the common cold. The opportunities are there. We need only to pursue them, and by pursuing them, we may help maintain the security of the free world.

VALEDICTORY

Classmates:

Our schooldays have swiftly come to an end, and graduation is upon us. During our three years at Andover High School, we have built everlasting friendships, and have gained valuable understanding through various types of situations. As these years close, we are about to venture upon the main road of life. Our characters, like lumps of clay, have been molded and have taken form. We have rejoiced in fulfilling our youthful but important ambitions; we have also combated difficulties and disappointments. These experiences should prove valuable steppingstones in the path of adulthood.

Now, we are entering the second phase of our lives. Some of us will seek and gain our lofty goals; some of us will not succeed in accomplishing our present desires but will turn to other worthwhile achievements. Wherever our courses may lead, we shall always have one thing in common — that we studied, prayed, and matured together.

On this evening, we bid farewell to our school and to one another. May the future bring happiness and joy to all of us, and may we sometime meet again.

EDITORIAL THOUGHTS

No Stampeding Needed

It's interesting to note that the Selectmen have asked the School Committee to sit down and discuss future school needs.

At least one member of the School Committee has been concerned recently that the town will not have plans ready for a new school when it is needed, if steps are not taken immediately to discuss the problem frankly. This resulted in the up-coming meeting.

There have been ominous warnings of a new school — through the rapid residential growth in West Andover, via statistics on anticipated enrollments for the coming year, and through the plans recorded with the Planning Board for future construction in the area.

We can't ignore the warnings — it's vital to the town to keep planning apace with growth.

But we can't let new school construction interfere with other needed municipal expenditures either. There are other capital expenditures that will be required — and important ones, such as sewerage and drainage. These must not be allowed to wait indefinitely because there is the possibility of a new school requirement in the near future. We need a balanced capital expenditure program that will put school construction in its proper perspective with other town needs.

Residents should not be, in any sense, stamped into putting everything else off, because of the school problem.

Open Discussion Of Merit

When the School Committee meets next, one of the most important agenda items will be a report on the work of the merit rating committee, which has been continuing its evaluation of teachers who applied for the consideration.

Probably the whole town will have a better understanding of the problems the committee encountered, the solutions, and the results obtained, following this report.

While it is vital to the success of any merit plan to closely guard the identities of those who applied for evaluation, those who succeeded and those who failed; there can be no doubt in anyone's mind that a frank discussion of general practices followed by the committee will be of benefit to the residents of the town.

Only by a complete public understanding of the committee's work can there then be public acceptance of its decisions.

Miss Miriam Putnam is attending the "Library Buildings and Equipment Institute" held at the University of Maryland, a program designed to provide librarians, architects and administrators with the latest developments in the field of college, school and public library buildings and equipment. There will be an opportunity for those with individual building problems to have discussions with those who are expert in the areas of concern.

Among the subjects covered in addresses during the program are such important items as problems in contemporary planning, building equipment, lighting, heating and ventilating, economy, library consultants, engineers, architects and active librarians will be on hand to share their problems and experiences. The institute is sponsored by the Building and Equipment Section of the American Library Association.

Bookworms Open Reading Club

This year, from June 15-Sept. 19, the boys and girls of Andover are going to have a busy project, that of building the new addition to their room at the main library with the books that they read. The Bookworm club, open to all young people of Andover and Ballardvale, invites its members to sign up on the Building Roll, in either the main library or in the branch, take home a copy of the special reading lists, record the books which they read on their own personal record cards, and to add a brick to the large building design, which is posted in the library. On Sept. 19, all Bookworms are invited to the club party at the library, at which time there will be a special program for all who have signed the roll.

There will be another club open to the story tellers for any person 10 to 14 years of age. Tuesday mornings, from June 30 through July, at 10 o'clock, there will be a group meeting for those who wish to become good story-tellers themselves. Miss Lane will point out the fine points in telling stories, and boys and girls will take turns showing others what they have learned, and perhaps taking part in the story hour for younger children, which follows immediately after this group's meeting.

To make reading more fun, the number of books allowed at any one time has been increased from the usual four to six at a time for all children. Anyone who wishes may have these books stamped "vacation loan", to be due Sept. 15. Families planning to go away are reminded that fathers and mothers may take any number of books for their children if they make their request in person. Any book not in special demand or on reserve lists may be borrowed by parents from the adult department under the same regulations so that they, as parents, will have summer pleasure in reading.

Puppet Classes

There will be two weeks of classes in puppet making this summer, from June 24 to July 9. Twelve young people will be allowed to sign up for the group, so that those who wish to do so should contact the library at once. Puppets will be made in the summer and plans for rehearsing the plays and putting on a show in the fall will be drawn up in September. Details may be had at the library.

GLAD TIDINGS — Victor J. Will Jr., chairman of the St. Augustine's fund drive committee, reported to campaign workers Monday night that $407,125 has been given to the school building fund. The goal of $350,000 was heartily over-subscribed, after some 280 members cleaned up the bulk of the solicitation. An analysis of the gifts showed 248 advance gifts totalling $182,745; while 1,107 parish members gave $224,380. Very Rev. Henry B. Smith, O.S.A., pastor, expressed his appreciation for the work done, and to all the persons who gave to the fund. At right is Fr. Wenzel, and at Father Smith's right is James Doherty, parish campaign chairman. (Staff Photo)

What Our Readers Say—

To the Editor of the Townsman:

"On the occasion of your celebration of 'Andover's Centennial Graduating Class', may I express my disappointment that the residents of this community, in naming their high school, have disregarded the memory of the man whose vision and generosity first made possible a free secondary education for all the children of Andover? The decision to end the existence of the Punchard High School, an institution of ninety-eight years duration, must be regarded as a result of the compulsion for uniformity and standardization, alarmingly evident in contemporary America, which seeks to remove the distinctive character of so many of our unique institutions.

How can we expect the young people of our schools to respect the customs and conventions of society if we, as adults, display so conspicuously our contempt for historic tradition?"

Plans Were Made By Church Group

The Free Christian Church School Committee met with the Teachers June 11 to discuss plans for the coming year.

The announcement was made by the Rev. J. Allyn Bradford that the curriculum for next fall will be Pilgrim Series, which is published by the Congregational House in Boston. The general theme for the year will be "The Church". Mr. Bradford was on the staff of the Hancock Congregational Church before coming to Andover, where there is the largest Church School in the state.

Plans were made for a Family Service, an Advent Workshop, a Training Session for the Church School Committee and Teachers Meetings. Mrs. Bradford will meet with the Lower School teachers at their meetings. She served as a director of Christian Education for one year in the state of Washington.

GOLDEN AGE CIRCLE

short business meeting. Mrs. Rosenblad served refreshments.
